

Oil-Dri Announces Price Increases to Address Higher External Costs

June 24, 2026 8:05 PM EDT

CHICAGO, June 24, 2026 (GLOBE NEWSWIRE) -- Oil-Dri Corporation of America (NYSE: ODC) today announced plans to raise prices on the majority of its product portfolio during the first quarter of fiscal year 2027.

These pricing adjustments are in response to significant increases in costs outside of the company's control, including health insurance, freight, and resin-based packaging, among others.

Daniel S. Jaffee, President and Chief Executive Officer stated, "We are mindful of the effect price increases have on our customers, and we do not make these decisions without careful consideration. However, rising external costs have made this adjustment necessary in order to maintain the high quality of our products and service levels. At the same time, we are pursuing productivity and cost reduction initiatives for things that we do control to further mitigate margin erosion. We appreciate our customers' understanding and continued collaboration as we navigate these market conditions."

Oil-Dri sales representatives will communicate specific details of the price increase to their customers directly.
